About Osteopathy

Osteopathy looks at issues affecting normal movement and function throughout the body. It is classed as a manually applied form of medicine, and since the passing of the Osteopaths Act 1993, and the creation of the General Osteopathic Council, is classified as a Primary Healthcare Profession. As such you do not need to be referred by your doctor.

Most osteopaths work in private practice as this allows for maximum time to be made available for each consultation and treatment.

Osteopathy complements other facets of healthcare such as dentistry, chiropody, and general medical practise.

General Osteopathic Council (GOc) registered
Member of the British Osteopathic Association (BOA)

Our Services

We offer osteopathic care for the whole family and tailor our treatment programmes to each patient. Our clinics are situated in quiet surroundings with free parking available. Most conditions require more than one visit and we discuss the best options that suit each individual.

We work closely with other medical practitioners, and as such take a full case history of any present, or past conditions, as well as any medication you may be taking.

Should you require any investigative tests done such as x-rays, MRI, or blood screening we will refer you through the appropriate channels.
